20/56	Oil painting	Signed “G. Hughes, St. Jno. St Road, 1833”. Subject a schoolboy in long blue coat with yellow underskirt and red leather belt, white bands at nech, yellow stockings and black shoes, standing in an architectural setting. Probably a Christ’s Hospital schoolboy. George Hughes appears as bookseller, stationer and artist at 9 St. John Street road, London, in Pigot’s Directory, 1839. From a sale at Bridge House, Bridge Street, Leighton Buzzard, of the effectsof the late Mrs. G. Holberton Bassett, 4 th Nov 1954. Mrs. Bassett was a member of the family of Bassett bankers, who founded the Leighton Buzzard Bank in 1812, later amalgated with Barclays Bank. If it is a portrait of a member of the family, it is thought more likely to be that of the Square family of Devonshire, who first became connected with the Bassetts when the daughter of Dr. W.H. Square (died 1951) who came to Leighton Buzzard, married a Bassett in 1913.

(on the back is a typewritten slip stating that the ram 9or the picture) was the property of Mr. Howard of Dunstable. The painter seems to have been the Dunstable sign-writer, William Nicholls (Wm. Nicholls, painter, West-st. (Pigot’s Directory, 1823/4. 1839, Slater’s 1850) Nicholls William, sign painter, West Street (Kelly, 1854) William	About Nicholls, sign painter, Swan & Danks, 1862)) The landscape shows on the right a church evidently representing Dunstable Priory Church and on the left a windmill which might represent the West Syteet Mill. A building on the hilly horizon seems to represent a church (? St. Albans Abbey), but the painter has used a good deal of license. Mr. Howard may have been James Howard of Bedford, agriculturist and M.P., or perhaps the Mr. Charles Howard, whose Biddenham flock of 300 Oxfordshire Downs sheep was sold in 1855 (See Beds. Tiles, 18 th Nov 1955)

180/64		Architectural details from Stockwood House, Luton, built by John Crawley (architect not known) in 1739-40, on the site of an earlier house. The Crawleys were a local yeoman family, who owned lands in Luton at least as early as 1455, and whose pedigree can be traced back to 1400 or earlier. The estate was purchased from the Rotherhams (Farley branch) by Richard Crawley in 1708, father of John, and continued in the possession of the family, who lived in the mansion, until it was sold in 1945 by Mrs. Crawley Ross-Skinner to Luton Corporation. After occupation for eighteen years as a children's hospital, it was closed in 1958 and allowed to deteriorate, and finally demolished in 1964. The house was typical of the George II period, a rectangular red-brick building with stone dressings, a hipped roof with stone balustrade, and a pillared portico at the main entrance; with interior decorations after the Queen Anne style of the architect John James.

M/22/68		Documents relating to property in Castle Street, Luton. This property in Castle Street was in 1765 a farmhouse, with which went land in the open fields. The deceased owner, John Dalby, had mortgaged it. On his death (he was then living at Hurst, Berks.) his widow and eldest son sold most of the land to 3 other purchasers, and the farmhouse and close to Richard Windmill of Luton, innholder, thereafter called yeoman. In 1782 the house was bought by Henry Eggers of Whitechapel, sugar-refiner, who died in 1808. It then went to Francis Butterfield of Luton, cordwainter. The last documents is a sale catalogue of 1886 which describes it as a valuable roomy private residence, 24 Castle Street, with extensive garden.
